Tucked away in the heart of London’s vibrant West End, just a stone’s throw from Tottenham Court Road tube station, The Vestry House at St Giles-in-the-Fields stands as a testament to history and community. For nearly 300 years since 1734, this distinguished venue has been a cherished hub for gatherings and pivotal decisions.

Originally serving as the meeting place for the Parish Vestry, it played a crucial role in shaping the community long before modern local governance took root.

Recently restored with meticulous care, the Vestry House now opens its doors for commercial venue hire, offering an unparalleled setting for your important occasions.

Whether it’s intimate boardroom meetings, theatre style presentations, or elegant private dining experiences, our historic space sets the stage for success in London’s bustling West End.

Step into the Vestry Room, where history whispers through every corner. Adorned in a rich deep green, the walls tell tales of stewardship with the names of Churchwardens and Rectors etched in gold into its panels. Natural light floods the space through large windows, while the option to cosy up by the original fireplace adds a touch of warmth and intimacy.

Gather around the original oval oak table, dating back to 1701, where important decisions have been made for centuries.

The Vestry House offers a self-contained setup including a small kitchenette for refreshments and tastefully decorated WC facilities, every detail is attended to for your comfort and convenience. Space for a field kitchen is available nearby.

Experience the exclusivity of the Vestry House with its private entrance through The Resurrection Gate, leading into a picturesque courtyard perfect for pre-dinner drinks receptions on sunny days.

Importantly, every event held at the Vestry House directly contributes to sustaining St Giles in the Fields and fuelling their vital outreach efforts, enriching the lives of the local community.
